HALL PUTSCH - NOV 9, 2023

90TH ANNIVERSARY
HITLER BECOMING CHANCELLOR JAN 30, 1933

SYNOPSIS

The night of November 8, 1923, is arguably the most significant and transformative in the history of the twentieth century.

A localised uprising in the Bavarian capital of Munich, led by a small man with a toothbrush moustache and a poisonous yet compelling grandiloquence, would have repercussions that would lead to the political shackling of an entire nation, the most abhorrent crimes of the century and a world war.

You might say, Adolf Hitler came of age amid the smell of sweat and sawdust of a Munich beer hall.

In the political chaos of 1923, he was a local irritant, gaining popularity among workers and soldiers, the ethos of his Nazi Party spreading like a virus. His first attempt at attaining true power came with an attempted putsch on the already separatist government of Bavaria, which left him imprisoned.

Across a 60-minute documentary, divided into four distinct parts, this is the gripping story of how one turbulent night changed the world. This is history in microcosm, with the tension of a thriller, and repercussions that echo to this day. A night that ended in failure and disarray became the foundation stone for a revolution that would bring this radical rabble-rouser supreme power.

THE STORY OF BRITISH CINEMA

SYNOPSIS

The long and marvellous history of British cinema is one of varied and adventurous filmmaking. Yes there is something distinctly homegrown, something tangibly British, but it is a happy breed that contains multitudes: comedies, romances, social dramas, thrillers, epics, musicals, and more. Every genre, in fact.

It is a far more varied world than you would imagine and features the work of some of the greatest directors the medium has ever produced.

Alfred Hitchcock. David Lean. Carol Reed. The kaleidoscopic duo of Powell & Pressburger.

A world dominated by de facto studios and their idiosyncratic moguls who put British film onto a world stage.

Cecil Hepworth. Alexander Korda. Michael Balcon. J. Arthur Rank.

The very concept of a British film is wonderfully elusive, changing with the times, pioneering new directions, and giving us some of the finest movies ever made.

ART OF FILM

SYNOPSIS

The Art of Film explores the movements, styles, themes, subgenres, eras, regions, studios, and brilliant sensibilities that have shaped cinema. In other words, films that for fascinating reasons can be grouped together.

Each episode will explore a particular community of films and discover what ties them together, looking for patterns, what defines these artistic groups within the world of film, and how they came to be. Who were the creative forces behind them? Were they a natural reaction to the times? On a deeper level, The Art of Film explores how we measure and categorise the history of film. What makes it art?

Hosted by Ian Nathan, who will frame the films in question, placing them in time, telling the stories of their making, their context, what glues them together, and what these collected works have told us about the world. This is alongside regular expert contributors, and an interview with specially selected historians or cultural commentators or cast and crew. Those with specific knowledge. # HITLER: UNCOVERING HIS FATAL OBSESSION

SYNOPSIS

The release of this documentary series will mark the year WWII became the most catastrophic conflict in human history. From the 1920s a detestation of the Soviet Untermenschen had been a central part of Hitler's ideology. A war with Soviet Russia was always a precondition for the success of his racial vision; for the flourishing of Aryan man. When Hitler did eventually invade Russia in 1941, it took the Soviets entirely by surprise – until this point, the two nations had been freely cooperating. What followed was a campaign of unparalleled barbarism, on a scale of destruction unmatched in history. The Red Army's disastrous initial response would gradually be turned around through elemental spirit, enormous human sacrifice and strategic intuition. Some of the most famous battles in the history of warfare would pan out through this epochal struggle. Eventually, the Soviet 'steamroller' would turn things around, repelling the invaders, recapturing scarred, lost territory, and marching all the way to Berlin, where the Hammer and Sickle would fly from the Reichstag; the Untermensch now standing astride Hitler's capital. The partition of Berlin would follow, setting the scene for the Cold War and 50 years of Communist domination in Eastern Europe.

FILM NOIR

SYNOPSIS

Thematically, film noir frequently centred on portrayals of women of questionable virtue—this had become rare in Hollywood post the pre-Code era. Double Indemnity, directed by Billy Wilder; setting the mould was Barbara Stanwyck's unforgettable femme fatale, Phyllis Dietrichson.

Influenced by Marlene Dietrich, who had built her career playing women for Sternberg. The film's financial success and 7 Oscar nominations made it influential of the early noir period. A slew of now-renowned noir "bad girls" followed, such as those played by Rita Hayworth in Gilda (1946), Lana Turner in The Postman Always Rings Twice (1946) (Pictured), Ava Gardner in The Killers (1946), and Jane Greer in Out of the Past (1947). The iconic noir counterpart to the femme fatale, the private eye, arrived such as The Maltese Falcon (1941), with Humphrey Bogart as Sam Spade, and Murder, My Sweet (1944), with Dick Powell as Philip Marlowe.

This series will explore the work & influences of directors & writers, including Nicholas Ray, Jules Dassin, Robert Siodmak, Fritz Lang, Edward Dmytryk, Orson Welles, Raoul Walsh, Jacques Tourneur and many more.

WWII & CINEMA

SYNOPSIS

Filmed on location at the Imperial War Museum Duxford and Imperial War Museum Churchill War Rooms. Hosted by Author and Empire co-editor Ian Nathan and Author & Journalist Dr Bonnie Greer OBE, with contributions from Film Critic Derek Malcom and Daily Telegraph columnist Simon Heffer

World War II and Cinema are inextricably linked. It was the first time that the film industry had to tackle a conflict as it was being fought. Films were made to boost public morale, and as a highly effective form of propaganda. Despite the dangers of bombings, cinema attendance actually rose during the war years, as the public looked for any chance to escape the harsh realities of the time. And long after the war's end, directors have continued to return to the subject, to the point where so much of the conflict has been brought to the big screen; the horrors, and the heroism; the great battles, and the incredible personal stories. World War II, is a genre of film all to itself.

COLD WAR & CINEMA

SYNOPSIS

The Cold War and Cinema is told in 3 episodes with the world coming to the end of WW2 where the United States and the Soviet Union fought together as allies against the Axis powers. However, the relationship between the two nations was a tense one. Americans had long been wary of Soviet communism and Russian leader Joseph Stalin's tyrannical rule of his own country. For their part, the Soviets resented the Americans' decades-long refusal to treat the USSR as a legitimate part of the international community as well as their delayed entry into World War II, which resulted in the deaths of tens of millions of Russians.

The Series will be structured in the following time periods with talking heads recalling the story of the early days of WW2 Europe through the nuclear arms race, American paranoia, Korean War and the Soviets movement into Europe, McCarthyism. NATO & the Warsaw PACT leading up to the building of the Berlin Wall.

RAILWAY MURDERS

SYNOPSIS

As early railway travel became popular with the British travelling public, luggage thefts were common and violent robberies occurred from time to time.

Many opponents of the railways painted a gloomy picture of the prospect which faced the lone passenger in the unlit carriages.

Trains in those days were not corridor connected, and men were robbed and women assaulted often enough to provide pessimists and hostile sections of the press with plenty of material.

The first railway murder, however, did not occur until 1864. It was one of the most sensational crimes of the century.

This new drama-documentary series, presented by Nicholas Day and from the same team that produces Murder Maps, looks at some of the murders that took place on the British Railway network from the 1800's to the 1950's.

SYNOPSIS

Agatha Christie's novels have been translated into 44 languages and sold in 103 countries. After Shakespeare, she is the world's best selling author in any genre with over 2 billion books sold. On the 75th anniversary of the creation of one of her most famous characters, the immortal spinster sleuth Miss Marple, comes a brand new documentary. In a game of sleuth and deduction it sets out to solve one of the greatest puzzles: just what makes Agatha Christie such a successful writer?

This 60 minute documentary introduces viewers to new fields of scientific enquiry using sophisticated computer analysis of Christie's every written word, her sentence structure, story arcs, poisons used, red herrings, clues and so on. Produced with the full cooperation of Chorion, the company that owns the Agatha Christie estate, this documentary, just like one of her own famous stories, combines all the thrills of a real detective investigation with the exciting race for a new scientific discovery.
